OPEN YOUR MIND AND HEART

Dear Student,

You've likely heard how one of the most difficult things to do is to listen to another's perspective, let alone experiencing that perspective yourself. At the KSGA 20490 Policy Lab: Electoral Integrity in Comparative Perspectives, you will do exactly that.

In the first year students. KSGA 20490 Policy Lab: Electoral Integrity in Comparative Perspectives

For the first time this Fall, the Keough School is offering a policy lab designed for first-year students. KSGA 20490 Policy Lab: Electoral Integrity in Comparative Perspectives.

The lab

Professor Julio Juárez Gámiz is teaching the lab and has a rich background serving as an electoral observer for the United Nations Development Program for the 2009 and 2012 federal elections in Mexico. He has carried out electoral observation projects under the supervision of the United Nations Development Program in Mexico’s 2009 and 2012 federal elections and worked as a senior advisor to the General Council’s 2012 federal elections.

The lab will explore the challenges and opportunities policymakers face when designing electoral legislation, maximizing civic rights without compromising certainty. The lab will also teach students how to engage in meaningful activism, making connections on and off-campus.

Firsthand and have been on-the-ground decision-makers. For example, you might work alongside policymakers to create legislation that considers the needs of underserved people in conflict and governmental institutions.

Visit the Learning Resource Center (LRC)!

The Learning Resource Center (LRC) offers several programs for first-year students. KSGA 20490 Policy Lab: Electoral Integrity in Comparative Perspectives.

For example, the LRC offers several programs for first-year students. KSGA 20490 Policy Lab: Electoral Integrity in Comparative Perspectives.

Visit the Learning Resource Center (LRC)!